ADDRESSES AT MEETINGS OF SCIENTISTS IN BOSTON
Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 27.-The maintenance of the energy of the race is the real task of our civilization. Dr. Thomas E. B. Baker, secretary and acting president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, said in an address today at a sectional meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Keeping alive the intellectual and spiritual forces of the race he urged as essential to such maintenance.

"In fall of every nation inevitable" he asked. "It would be a bold prophet who would say no to this question. But to answer it in the affirmative means the acceptance of a form of fatalism that will ultimately bring with it a decline in human confidence and effort."

"The world now shows signs of alarm as it contemplates its many disorders. We are forced to notice an increase in a spirit of morbid introspection which if continued may lead to the despondency which is a characteristic of the people whose culture is falling."

"The idea of progress had been almost an axiom in the popular thinking for nearly a century, but now in its stead the conception of inevitable degeneration makes itself heard from time to time. Our feelings revolt at this desperate view of the future. Optimism is an essential in the conservation of our present stock of human energy. Inertia will overtake the race if we lose confidence in the future."

"The energy of the race can only be conserved through new ideas, new discoveries and the application of science to our lives. Mankind will degenerate unless there is a continuous flow of new ideas from the brains of great thinkers to the lives of the unthinking masses."

"We often mistake restlessness for energy. We may be making a great display of energy on enterprises that have no real value. The rapid increase of interest in sports and recreation is a natural corollary to the heightened feverishness of our age. If we believe that the conservation of man's energy depends on high thinking, we should attach more importance to study and contemplation than we do at present."

"Popular education can increase the sum total of human energy by bringing to the surface the dormant powers which would have remained latent. It liberates the mind of superior endowments."

"At the present time we observe the increasing power of the masses. We can imagine that the power of the masses of unthinking people might be increased; that they might dictate more completely the path which thinkers must follow in order to secure a hearing. Science and the efforts of the Ku Klux Klan to reduce the country to a state of mob rule."

"We have no assurance that our civilization will be permanent. But so long as we believe that our culture and our ideals of living ought to be conserved, our chief means of testing our success in maintaining them will be the amount of energy, and especially intellectual energy, that is being produced."

Speaking before the American Astronomical society, Colonel John Mills, Engineering corps, United States army, said there seems to be a strong probability of some fundamental relationship among the phenomena that had produced the similarity of main features and markings on the surfaces of the earth, the moon and Mars. He advanced the idea that a reconciliation might be possible if the two leading theories as to the surface features of the moon-volcanic action and impact by meteors.

Dr. H. M. Parshley, associate professor of Zoology at Smith college, described before the Entomological Society of America how nature in the course of evolution had solved the problem of flight adaptation in waterbugs by giving to some individuals the power of flight and denying it to others. This society at a business session elected as its president, Professor T. D. A. Cockerell, of the University of Colorado, and approved a union of all biological societies in the country.

Addressing the American Psychological association, Dr. Harry D. Kitson, professor of psychology at Indiana university, said that a popular theory that tall men and heavy men made the best salesmen had been disproved by scientific analysis of the earnings of six hundred salesmen. He was convinced that the idea that by mere animal bulk a large salesman could impress or dominate a client, was exploded.
